

REWRITING THE STORY

— WITH THE WORLD'S —

WOMEN & GIRLS

Around the world, ICRW is working with our partners to address the immediate impacts of the pandemic and create a stronger, healthier and more fully empowered future for all.

In India, our team is collaborating with local communities and the national government to help partners receive critical supplies needed during the pandemic, mitigate the impact on women and girls, and keep families healthy:

With our project partners on UMANG in Jharkhand and GEMS for Boys in Rajasthan, our teams have been reaching out to those most affected by the pandemic to coordinate distribution of masks, sanitizers, soap and essential supplies.

Dr. Ravi Verma, Director of ICRW Asia, has been appointed to the Operations Research Group of the National COVID-19 Taskforce convened by the Indian Council of Medical Research. In this role, he will be able to help ensure that interventions improve the situation for all adversely impacted – particularly marginalized women and girls.

Our team has taken advantage of its regular communications, such as the UMANG Vaaninewsletter produced in Hindi and English, to highlight the efforts of team members and partners, help alleviate fear and stigma around COVID-19, and promote access to relief benefits and response efforts in remote communities.

Working together, we'll come out stronger and more connected than ever in order to rewrite the story for women and girls.
